

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A direction indicating device in which a current display direction is determined in consideration of the historical information of a direction of vehicle specified by a direction specifying unit 1 and a previous display direction, to be specific, in a case where the current direction of vehicle specified by the direction specifying unit 1 agrees with a previous direction of vehicle, the current display direction is changed to agree with the current direction of vehicle, and in a case where the current direction of vehicle specified by the direction specifying unit 1 is different from the previous direction of vehicle, the current display direction is made to agree with the previous display direction.